Body

Here are some of the smaller promises unveiled in the 2022 federal budget on Thursday:

$1.9 billion over 24 years to build and operate the new Canadarm3 for the next generation NASA Lunar Gateway project.

$1.3 billion over the next five years and $331.2 million ongoing to support the long-term stability of Canada's asylum system to better help people seeking refuge from violence and persecution.

$159 million over five years, starting in 2022-23, to protect Canadian post-secondary and research institutions from foreign intelligence agencies.

$593.3 million over five years, starting in 2022-23, to help provinces and territories support projects to prevent gender-based violence and help survivors.

$20 million over five years, starting in 2022-23, to better understand the long-term effects of COVID-19.

$40.9 million over five years and $9.7 million ongoing to federal granting councils to support scholarships for promising Black student researchers.

$183.1 million over five years, starting in 2022-23, to reduce plastic waste, building on a 2018 G7 commitment.

$55.1 million over three years, starting in 2022-23, to protect British Columbia's old-growth forests.

$329.4 million over six years, starting in 2022-23, to triple the size of the Agricultural Clean Technology Program.

$469.5 million over six years, starting in 2022-23, to Agriculture and Agri-Food Canada to expand the Agricultural Climate Solutions program's On-Farm Climate Action Fund.

$100 million over three years, starting in 2022-23, to help Health Canada deal with the opioid addiction crisis.

$25 million over two years, starting in 2022-23, to start a pilot project to make menstrual products more widely available to those facing barriers to them.

$100 million over five years, starting in 2022-23, to create a forthcoming federal action plan to support LGBTQ rights.
